How to set up a Homeoffice

One of the keys to working from home successfully is being able to organise yourself in such a way that your home doesn't become an office every day of the week. The workspace has to be set up creatively and cleverly to allow you to work at ease and in comfort. To create a home office space these basic items are required: a good internet connection, a computer, an ergonomic chair that keeps you healthy while you work, a desk, and a place to store your work papers and equipment.

The size of the space doesn't matter as long as you use a set, clearly distinguished area for working. If you can't set aside a room in your house solely for this, you can choose to separate an area, for example, by colour, layout, or style so you feel like you're in a different room.

The choice of furniture will depend on the available space, the type of work you do, and the time you're going to spend in your home office. In any case, no matter your circumstances, try to create an attractive, functional, and comfortable working environment as possible so that your creativity, wellbeing, and productivity remain unaffected.

At ACTIU, we offer a selection of furniture that can meet all users' needs whilst ensuring wellbeing, health, and especially, functionality.

We are in a period of digital transformation that has forced a complete rethink of how we work and communicate. We are well aware of that and we work with COOL WORKING, a philosophy based on people's wellbeing and productivity.

Keys to creating a healthy working environment at home

Working from home doesn't mean giving up on introducing good habits. A well-implemented home office offers efficiency as a result of the increased productivity of the people who have one. For example, cutting out the commute to work (less fatigue) or the chance for a better work-life balance helps boost workers' satisfaction with their job due to the extra time they have and the trust the company puts in them to work remotely. A happy worker performs much better.

Some data: according to the Spanish Network of Health Companies "healthy and happy people are more productive, spend double the time on their work, have 65% more energy, and a greater connection with their company. What's more, every Euro invested in health programmes offers companies a return of €3.50".

These are our suggestions of habits that will help you create a healthy and productive working environment:

Create a routine

Don't work in your pyjamas. Get up, have breakfast, and get dressed. Don't sit down at your computer or check your emails until you're ready. Set aside special times of the day for certain activities and use others strictly for working hard.

Plan your time

Set a schedule. Avoid mid-morning appointments. Obviously, working from home grants greater flexibility and freedom of time but we must not use that freedom to create chaos and mess. We should use it to be as productive as possible.

Invest in your workspace

Pay attention to the atmosphere and setting. We have already seen that there is a lot of choice and although space might be tight, try to create a space just for you, as much as you can. It needs to be well lit, ventilated, tray, clean, and have only what you need.

Avoid distractions

Don't mix business with pleasure. Electronic distractions can sometimes creep in by accident and if we don't fully focus on avoiding them, we risk them getting the better of us. For the most demanding tasks or activities, make especially sure to turn off and close everything that isn't helping and may be a distraction.

Take a break between tasks

It's important to keep our mind sharp and refresh our attention span with regular breaks between tasks. What's more, it's important you take that break away from your work desk if you really want it to be effective. Breaks have to be completely removed from what you are working on.

Exercise

Do some type of exercise or sport daily, if possible. And be consistent. Keeping your body health is just as important as finishing the project on time.

Healthy food

A healthy diet plays an important role in good health and preventing serious illnesses such as cardiovascular diseases (heart attacks and strokes). Additionally, eating well helps reduce stress and protects us from minor illnesses such as colds or flus. A balanced, regular diet in moderate amounts maintains energy levels and improves performance.

Keep in touch.

If you work as a coordinator of a team, keep in touch during the day so that the people working with you know you're online. Create a shared calendar with the rest of the team to keep everyone informed of everyone's schedules and availability.

Review your productivity

As people looking for continuous improvement we should examine our habits and methods often, analyse them, and change them if we deem it necessary. You should review the time you spend on each job and the money you earn for it at least once a year. This will show you if you are really being efficient.

Ergonomics and Health

We spend 9 hours and 19 minutes on average at our workstation, most of which is sitting at a computer. We should be very clear on how posture and setting affect our performance; however, in spite of its importance, we usually don't give it the attention it deserves and most of the time we fail to implement healthy habits at work.

Bad posture can lead to serious problems.

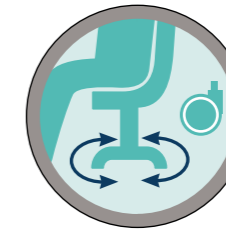

Sometime you get what you pay for. Choosing a good seat is proof of that. It's important to think carefully about the right choice of furniture we're going to use for homeworking, especially as we spend more than a third of our time working.

Below, we offer a series of healthy habits to improve ergonomics and avoid health problems:

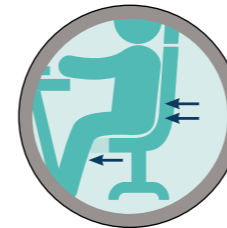

Don't slouch:

head, neck, and back in line and straight with your shoulders relaxed. A good backrest and headrest help to ensure good posture.

Mobile base:

a chair with wheels allows us to move easily without sharp torso movements. If it has a backrest that moves with us, it will also reduce the risk of muscle strain.

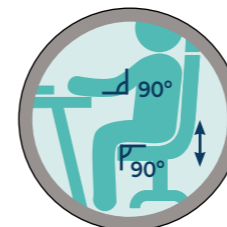

Sit properly:

a good chair with the right back support and seat that can be adjusted to the required depth and comfort.

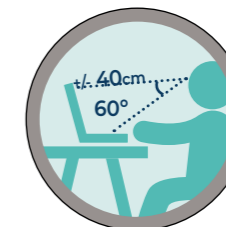

Change posture:

You shouldn't stay in the same position or stare at the screen for extended periods of time. It is a good idea to take a 5/10 minute break every hour.

Arms and legs at a 90° angle:

it's important to keep to these positions to avoid joint problems. Adjusting the height and armrests will grant the most comfort.

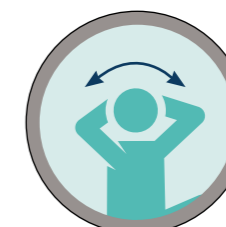

Computer screen:

the screen should be slightly below eye level, at a distance of approximately 40cm (arm's-length), and with a viewing angle of the screen and keyboard of no more than 60°.

Feet flat on the floor:

Keep them completely flat on the floor or use a Footrest.

Exercises:

Do stretches to tone, stay flexible, and avoid aches and pains.

How to decorate a Home Office

Our workplace should inspire creativity, be light, and make it easy to organise tasks. There are many factors and details to consider when setting up a home office.

Colours, ideas, inspiration

Home desks have become a trend. Simple shapes, lots of light, large tables and desks, and a wall to put up whatever inspirational support we want. The idea behind decorating an office can be affordable if we are able to think about the different factors and organise everything optimally.

Choose your style

We often follow fashionable trends without really thinking if it suits us. This is a big mistake that almost all of us make by following fashions. Our advice is to look for your style, know what is calming for you, your colour and material tastes. This is the only way to create the perfect space for you.

Decorate a creative workspace

A cool space, where we are comfortable, balanced, and relaxed, will enable us to focus and work in an ideal space for creativity. One of the current decorating trends is the choice to make our own decorations. These small items may make all the difference and help create a unique space just to our liking.

What colours to use

Tastes are an individual matter. That's why everyone will know which colour works best and is most relaxing for them. However, white, cream, or soft pastel coloured spaces, with matching tones, offer peace and serenity when working.

Organise the space

This may be one of the most important concepts in setting up a home office. Not everyone has a large space to flesh out their ideas. That's why we recommend you try to organise all the furniture, shelves, drawers, and documents in a way that means you know exactly where everything is because a pretty home office is useless if you can't find anything.

There are lots of designs and ideas for decorating home offices. But, as we said above, tastes are an individual matter.

It's important to remember that organisation will be the key factor in decorating an office. Choose a desk that's big enough, where you can put everything you need, an ergonomic chair, where you can sit for hours without damaging your health, and pick a space for tray, easily accessible shelves or filing. This will save us time when we're looking for a document or even something like the stapler.

What is your ideal home office like?

STYLE Nordic

For more than a decade, a design trend has been appearing in huge numbers of houses like a breath of fresh air. A very apt choice of words! We're talking about the Nordic style, which comes from the cold of Scandinavia to the warmth of our homes to provide a significant touch of elegance.

It has evolved over the years to become a style offering great sophistication, seriousness, and balance whilst providing the necessary warmth to combat the cold outside. Yet it remains true to its roots. The Nordic style uses the natural resources of its surroundings, from the light to wood, to deliver stunning results.

The Nordic style seeks to create open spaces with mostly straight lines and curves. All pieces of furniture must therefore be practical. This is why versatility is a key trait.

STYLE Minimalist

The minimalist interior design style is perfect for those who love things to be neat and tray, those who feel at ease in simple and calm spaces. "Less is more" is the concept behind this interior design style.

Minimalist interior design styles began in the United States in the '60s but it was in the '70s that they really took off.

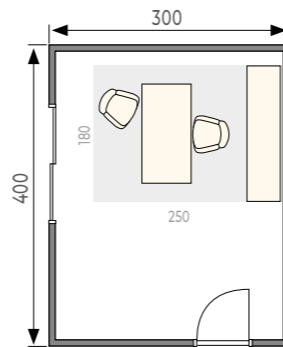

Formica laminates that ooze luxury are key in this type of decor. In the minimalist style, furniture must have very similar colours to the floor and walls.

Smooth surfaces, glass, and stones are preferred in this style.

STYLE Industrial

The industrial style features a marked use of objects and items linked to old factories, workshops, garages, and so on, which can be combined with other current trends such as recycling and the use of vintage pieces.

Stripped back designs are common where pipes, steel beams, brick walls, and even electric wiring can be seen and iron, steel, and/or rough wood furniture with simple, straight lines is used. The most prevalent colours are particularly neutral; white, black, grey, brown, and beige are the main tones.

STYLE Modern

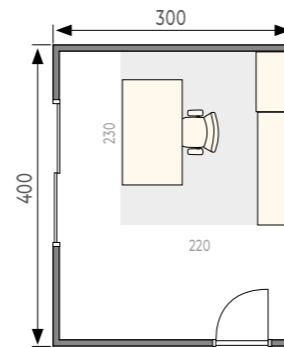

Rooted in German and Scandinavian design and architecture, the modern style is simple and unadorned. It refers back to the period between 1920 and 1950. Furniture and decoration in the modern style use natural materials, neutral or earthy colours, and shy away from unnecessary details.

One of the main beliefs behind the modern design movement is the idea that “form is subject to function”. In other words, the design of all furniture and decorative items should reflect their intended purpose, and if a decorative element has no practical purpose then it should be removed.

STYLE Mediterranean

In these designs the centre point is the light which sweeps aside everything in its path to reveal spaces that, paradoxically, conjure up the warmth of the sun and freshness of the ocean. Whitewashed walls and tiled or ceramic floors combined with strokes of other fresher colours (normally with a blue base) help to create that unmistakable feeling.

Decoration is sure to include artisan items made from clay, wicker, glass and so on, dried herbs, fresh flowers and anything that helps add texture.

The exteriors are also very important and are used to such an extent that they become merely an extension of the rest of the house.
